United Progressive Alliance (UPA) Chairperson, Sonia Gandhi dedicated the North Eastern Indira Gandhi Regional Institute of Health and Medical Sciences (NEIGRIHMS), at Mawdiangdiang, Shillong on March 5, 2010. She was accompanied by the Union Minister for Health and Family Welfare and President of the Governing Body of NEIGRIHMS, interim facility and later built a sprawling campus on the outskirts of Shillong at a cost of Rs.423 crore. The hospital has a 30-bed Intensive Care Unit and 35 specialty and super specialty departments and when fully functional it will have 68 Senior Resident doctors, 70 Junior Resident doctors and 39 faculty members.

Addressing the gathering at the NEIGRIHMS auditorium, Smti. Gandhi said that with the dedication of NEIGRIHMS, the dream of former Prime Minister late Rajiv Gandhi to provide the people of Northeast with access to affordable medical care is being realized. Pointing out the lack of some faculties and other related facilities in the Institute, Smti. Gandhi assured that the Central Government will actively looked into the problems and will strive to render all necessary support to ensure that the Institute could achieve the purpose for which it was set up. Stating that the priority of the UPA Government is to provide the best public health care facility to the people, Smti. Gandhi informed that the UPA Government had launched its flagship programme, the National Rural Health Mission to Shri. Ghulam Nabi Azad, Meghalaya Chief Minister Dr. D D Lapang, Shri Vincent Pala Union Minister of State for Water Resources, officials of NEIGRIHMS besides senior state government officials.

This 500-beded super specialty hospital has been designed on the lines of the premier All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS), New Delhi, and Postgraduate Institute of Medical Education and Research (PGIMER), Chandigarh. The Institute is the first of its kind in the northeast that will provide the best of health facilities in the region.

Conceived by Rajiv Gandhi 23 years ago, the Institute has been functioning since 2002 first as an upgrade and expand healthcare facilities and added that soon a similar programme will also be launched for the urban masses.

Reminding that diseases like Tuberculosis, Malaria, HIV/AIDS, Cancer are public health challenges, the existence of Institutes like NEIGHRIMS with its research facilities will go a long way in providing right and curative treatment to such patients besides providing correct information, education and communication to the people on how to take care of themselves, said Smti. Gandhi.

Earlier the Union Minister for Health and Family Welfare, Shri. Ghulam Nabi Azad informed that NEIGHRIMS was established at the cost of Rs. 422 crores and when fully functional the Institute will have 35 specialities and super specialities departments. With the aim of improving the health care system throughout the country, Shri. Azad said that more medical colleges will be established in the North East and the country as a whole and said that special concessions have been put in place for the North Eastern region so as to attract private investors to set up medical colleges here. He further added that a few dozen nursing schools will be established in the next two years and Meghalaya has been identified as one of the states where such nursing schools will be set up. He further informed that Rs. 67.05 crores has been earmarked for the establishment of a herbal institute under the Department of Ayurveda, Yoga and Naturopathy, Unani, Siddha and Homoeopathy (AYUSH) within the premises of NEIGHRIMS.

The Chief Minister of Meghalaya, Dr D.D.Lapang, in his brief address, drew attention to the shortcomings of the Institute such as the non-filling up of sanctioned posts of specialized medical personnel and the need for the establishment of a Cancer wing in the NEIGHRIMS.

Later in the day, Smti. Gandhi formally inaugurated the Don Bosco Centre for Indigenous Cultures (DBCIC) at Mawlai, Shillong. It is worth mentioning that the DBCIC is the largest in Asia to showcase the indigenous cultures and heritage.

Lauding the Salesian Brothers of the Catholic Church for their dedicated service in the field of education and other social services, she expressed hope that the museum will emerge as one of the academic centres in the North East Region which will act as a channel in strengthening the bond of brotherhood of the North East people.

“The recent visit of Her Excellency Sheikh Hasina Wajed, Prime Minister of Bangladesh to India is a landmark in the history of the relationship between India and Bangladesh. The two countries reached several areas of understanding which would result in wide ranging consequences both economic and political. Visionaries like our Prime Minister, Dr Manmohan Singh and Sheikh Hasina Wajed reaffirmed the shared historical bondage, traditional linkages, socio economic inter-dependence between the two countries which envisages opening the doors to a new phase in our bilateral relations. With the new spirit and encouragement received from this engagement, I am standing here on the soil of Bangladesh to pick up the threads and explore the possibility of restructuring the historical bondage for progress and economic development of the people on both sides of the border,” said the Meghalaya Chief Minister, Dr D D Lapang during his speech at the inaugural session of the India Trade Fair 2010, North East India Bangladesh Trade & Investment Summit held at Sheraton Hotel, Dhaka, Bangladesh today. The Trade Fair was inaugurated by the Bangladesh Finance Minister, Mr Abul Maal A Muhith.

During his speech, Dr Lapang said that trade and commerce across the border has been continuing since time immemorial and the barter system was in practice even during the 18th century. The system in various forms continued till 1971 but stopped abruptly in 1974. He informed that Meghalaya is sharing border ‘haats’ with Bangladesh which are located in Khasi Hills and Garo Hills, at Dawki, Borsora, Mahendraganj and Gasuapara. In a grand reception held at the Meghalaya Legislative Assembly, Arts and Culture Building, Rilbong, Shillong on January 29, 2010, the Speaker of the Lok Sabha, Smti. Meira Kumar inaugurated the 12th Annual Conference of the North East Region Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (NERCPA). In attendance was the Union Minister of State for Water Resources, Shri. Vincent Pala, the Deputy Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, Shri. K Rahman Khan, Meghalaya Chief Minister, Dr. D D Lapang, Speakers and Deputy Speakers of the North Eastern States and other officials.

This year's conclave saw the meeting of minds to deliberate upon "the impact of insurgency activities in the North East India on Socio-Economic Development and its solution thereof".

The NERCPA, which was established in the year 1996, is the only unique and broad based forum for parliamentarians and legislators of the North East States. Over the years, it has evolved into a vibrant and effective forum for not only advancing the interest of the region, but also for developing the parliamentarian fraternity and raise concerted voice on the issues of common interest of the region. The NERCPA has also inspired the MPs of the North East Region to come together on a common platform irrespective of party affiliation to form the North East Forum of MPs.

Delivering the inaugural address, Smti. Meira Kumar drew focus to the problems plaguing the North Eastern Region which continues to impede its development. Stating that despite the existence of rich natural resources and enormous potential for growth, it is a stark reality that the North East is grappling with multifarious problems of underdevelopment, unemployment, backwardness and insurgency. Adding that the per capita gross State domestic product of the region is less than the rest of the country she said that the region's share of road and rail networks as well as energy consumption is also below the national average. While literacy rate is higher than the national average, this has not transformed into a high rate of employment due to lack of economic development and industrial activities in the region.

The Central Government has been committing large amount of resources by way of special economic and developmental packages for the region. However, as per the Report on the Demand for Grants for the Ministry of Development of the North East Region for the year 2008-09, as many as 233 projects are lagging behind the schedule due to the delays in the utilization of funds and limited working seasons. Therefore, Smti. Meira Kumar called for greater commitment to pursue such projects for the region within a stricter time-frame

Affirming that it is the responsibility of the States in the region as well as the nation as a whole to address these developmental challenges, she reiterated the need for a peaceful atmosphere where security of life and property can be guaranteed to the people creating an environment that is conducive to investment.

Smti. Meira Kumar further stated that initiatives are needed to bring back those influenced by the culture of violence, into the mainstream of society. As violence and democracy cannot co-exist, movements which are instrumental in depriving ordinary citizens of their fundamental right to life and liberty and undermining development cannot claim any place in a democratic society, she added. The need of the hour, she felt, was for people to actively participate in the decision-making process to bring about durable peace and prosperity to the region.

Speaking as the Guest of Honour, Dr. D D Lapang said that insurgency has its roots in socio-economic and political environment of the region. It is reinforced by a strong desire to safeguard local identities and the perceived neglect of the North Eastern Region. It is impossible to either start or abolish any such movement without winning the hearts and minds of the people, he added. For a resolution to this impasse, the insurgent groups need to have a real desire to solve the problems and the Government has to create an atmosphere of confidence whereby there can be a serious meeting of minds, Dr. Lapang said.
Shri Tanka Bahadur Rai, Speaker, Assam Legislative Assembly and Chairman, NERCPA, in his keynote address, delved at length on the aims and objectives of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) and NERCPA. Informing that the NERCPA is a branch of the CPA, Mr. Rai said that the CPA has emerged as a custodian of parliamentary democracy, making remarkable contributions towards democratic consolidation through its member-parliaments. Its endeavours for promoting the spirit of mutual cooperation and understanding among member-countries, for setting benchmarks for good governance and for building peace and bridges of understanding among people and parliamentarians of the Commonwealth have been commendable. Mr. Rai also said that in its turn, the NERCPA has contributed greatly in furthering the aims and objectives of the Association by bringing together the members of the region in regular conferences and meetings. Such deliberations, no doubt, will help the people of the region in fostering democratic values and mutual understanding so very essential for addressing issues of common interest.

The inaugural function was presided by the Speaker of the Meghalaya Legislative Assembly and newly elected Chairman of the NERCPA, Shri. Charles Pyngrope.

Expansion of the ICDS Scheme

The Government of India through the Ministry of Women and Child Development envisaged that all the un-covered villages be covered under the ICDS Scheme for the welfare and development of women and children. A rapid expansion of the ICDS Scheme is under progress.

The total number of Anganwadi Centres sanctioned by the Government of India upto 2009-2010 is 3881 and the Department has been able to operationalise 3655 Anganwadi Centres upto January 2010.

The total Mini Anganwadi Centre i.e villages/villages/hamlets above 150 but below 300 population has been sanctioned by the Government of India for 1234 Anganwadi Centres during 2009-2010 and the Department has been able to operationalise 1232 such centres upto December 2009.
Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee recently stated that growth this year would be around 7.5 per cent, while the Prime Minister’s Economic Adviser, Dr. C Rangarajan, projected the economy would expand by 8 per cent during the next fiscal. The growth rate slipped from 9 per cent to 6.7 per cent during 2008-2009 on account of the global recession. However, driven by stimulus packages and signs of recovery in the international market, the growth in the current fiscal is expected to be quite commendable, despite the poor contribution of the agriculture sector, which was plagued by droughts in several parts of the country.

The economy has, however, been facing other problems such as fiscal deficits, food inflation and unemployment. Though there are hopes of food inflation being steadily brought under control, deficits have been bothering the system. Some experts feel that subsidies need to be trimmed, leaks in disbursals through the massive welfare schemes plugged and improvement ensured in transparency and accountability. There is need to seriously ponder whether in a situation where over 35 per cent of the population languishes in poverty and squalor, welfare schemes targeted for this sector can be curtailed.

The other big worry is that economic growth has not spurred job creation. One reason for this is the sharp increase in the labour force, which has grown around 2.95 per cent between 1999-2000 and 2004-06 and has been double the population growth. Even though the employment growth rate had risen by 2.89 per cent during the same period, it was not sufficient to tackle the situation arising from unemployment and underemployment. The impact of NREGS cannot be doubted but it has not had the desired effect to transform the situation.

It is well-known that liberalization resulted in the induction of labour-saving equipment, thereby causing lay-offs and ban on new recruitment. New service sector occupations have no doubt been coming up but the scope of jobs has become limited. There are apprehensions that compared to the large number of engineering colleges that have come up in the last few years, the job potential is much less as a saturation-like situation has already set in.

Indeed, the challenges for the new decade are enormous, principally because of the widening disparity between the rich and poor, the urban and the rural sector and also the poor social infrastructure of the country, specially in the realm of healthcare and education. Both these sectors cannot be considered areas of profit but the poor and the economically weaker sections of the society must be provided facilities at minimum cost. Massive resources would obviously be needed if the Government is sincere to ensure 100 per cent literacy, proper homes for all (including those displaced) and adequate and affordable health care facilities.

How this will be done remains a big challenge before the Government but with India’s emergence as a super power, resources have to be marshaled in this direction. Development experts believe, and quite rightly, that even if there are deficits, funds for the welfare of the poor, the tribals and the backward communities cannot be curtailed for it is very necessary to bring them into the mainstream of life and activity.

Apart from this, development of physical infrastructure is another crucial area, specially the construction of roads and ensuring connectivity to the interior districts of the country. Work in this sector has been going on and one can hope that this should be completed by the end of the present decade or even earlier.

But generation of power to the rural areas remain possibly the biggest challenge as there are 76 million rural households that are yet to switch on their first light bulb. Power Minister Sushil Kumar Shinde has stressed on rural electrification and making access to power across villages by the year 2012. Though this may take a few more years, determination and right policies may take this task possible. About Rs. 5,000 crores was released for rural electrification in the 10th Plan and in the present Plan the amount has witnessed a quantum jump at Rs. 38,000 crores.

The Planning Commission estimated India will need to generate 700,000 MW of additional power by 2020 to meet the demands of a growing economy. The 2006 Expert Committee on Energy estimated the country’s power needs at 960,000 MW based on a 9 per cent GDP growth. Coal, hydel and non-conventional (or renewable) energy were expected to meet at best 75 per cent of the needs. While the thrust would need to be on renewable energy, specially solar power, nuclear power would also have to be developed.

The immediate driver to growth is investment, which has risen from 26 per cent of GSP in 1999-2000 to almost 40 per cent today, supported by a corresponding rise in both domestic savings and capital inflows from abroad. Most of the increase occurred during the previous decade’s second half, thus accounting for the sharp growth acceleration during the period. Significantly, private investment has doubled to over 28 per cent at present while public investment remained more or less static at around 9-10 per cent. It needs to be pointed out that though public investment has not grown, its composition has changed from investment in a wide range of manufacturing and services to more focused areas of infrastructure in recent years.

What is imperative at this juncture is to ensure that the fruits of development reach all segments of society in a somewhat equal manner. The 11th Plan focused on ‘inclusive growth’ which the Prime Minister has been emphasizing time and again. But putting this into practice is indeed an uphill task which not only calls for prioritizing what is called ‘alternative development’ but also strengthening the panchayat system. Ensuring good end effective governance is the need of the day and with it more transparency and accountability of Government officials and politicians to make the system responsive to change.

The transformation of the rural sector particularly assumes a very crucial role as it has to be brought about by development of infrastructure facilities, incentives to the farming community, special attention for skill development for rural artisans and development of horticulture, floriculture and other agri-based industries. It may be useful that the suggestions of the expert group formed on agricultural indebtedness (under the chairmanship of Dr. Radhakrishnan, Director, Indira Gandhi Institute of Development Research) need to be considered seriously specially on increasing agricultural productivity, enhancing investments in agricultural infrastructure, research and extension and putting in place an effective system of rural mitigation, both in production and marketing.

Lab-to-land approach is yet to become effective and thus research from agricultural universities and the Indian Council Agricultural Research (ICAR) should reach the farm sector. It is quite obvious that rural regeneration would no doubt improve the condition of a major section of the population and make it an effective work force. We may recall the observation of Dr C Rangarajan way back in 1982: a mere one per cent increase in agricultural output led to a 0.7 increase in the national income, most of it which reached the developmental needs of rural India. – INFA

Two farmers from Meghalaya, Mrs. Bernadette Khongsngi, from Umran village, Ri Bhoi District and Mrs. Merry Corelia A. Sangma from West Garo Hills were felicitated by the Union Ministry of Agriculture at a function held in Vigyan Bhawan, New Delhi on 26th February 2010. Both the farmers have been selected for their innovative skills and entrepreneurial success in their respective horticulture enterprises. Mrs. Bernadette Khongsngi, a homemaker and mother of seven children through sheer hard work has turned her hobby into a money making enterprise with assistance from the office of the District Horticulture Office, Ri- Bhoi district. She has also inspired many other farmers from her village to take up floriculture as a self employment venture.

Likewise, Mrs. Merry Corelia A. Sangma had made cultivation of Anthurium a successful venture and also motivated others to take to growing flowers as a profit making enterprise.

The success stories of these two women farmers have been published in the ministry’s coffee table book “Harvest of Hope” on 101 success stories of farmers from across the country which was released by the Union Minister for Agriculture, Mr. Sharad Pawar. Speaking during the function, the minister congratulated the farmers and said that these farmers have not only helped their families by increasing their incomes but also have been more than inspirational for others by sheer dint of innovation and hard work. Commending the farmers present on the occasion, Mr. Pawar said that many of them have not kept their new found knowledge to themselves but felt it necessary and worthwhile to share with fellow farmers.

The Khasi and Jaintia people have been known to have the capability of building bridges from secondary roots of trees, in this case from rubber tree. These bridges are locally known as “Jingkieng Deingjri” literally meaning bridge of the rubber tree. Most of these bridges are made from the roots of a single tree and stretched and planted on the other side of the stream or river. The time period taken to build these bridges is about thirty years.

The two tier living root bridge at Nongriat is an example of this bio-engineering wonder. This is the only existing double-decker bridge and it lies south of Tyrna village in Cherrapunjee. The trek to the bridge is two and half hour steep decent of approximately 2200 feet from the village. Along the way one would encounter four smaller living root bridges of various shapes and sizes.
